At Night.

At night, when work is done, 'mid shadows gray that darken
And cling about the window, where once the sun was bright,
Sweet sounds come back again to which we used to hearken,
At night!

At night, though we are old, and the gray shadows clinging
Presage to us that shore where there is no more light;
Sometimes there come again sweet airs of childhood's singing,
At night!

At night we two may sit in shadow, open-hearted;
Long since the time is past when Hope was all in sight!
Softly we sing the songs of happy days departed,
At night!

At night the cricket's voice sounds through the shadows dreary;
Our songs, alas! like his, have neither charm nor weight;
We only rest and sing, hushed hopes and voices weary,
At night!

Circumstantial Evidence.

One of the most remarkable legal records of cases of circumstantial evidence is that of Soren Qvest, a Danish pastor. No man's life ever showed more dramatically the effects of ungoverned temper and the justice of God's dealings. The story is almost unknown, we believe, to American readers.

Soren from his birth was a victim to a fiery temper. When but a child he killed a dog which provoked him. When at college, he killed a comrade in a burst of passion.

He became a clergyman, and was a devout, estimable man, but for this one uncontrollable fault. A man named Morten Burns, whom Soren rejected as a suitor for his daughter, vowed to be revenged on the old man.

He sent his brother, Neils Burns, to work as a servant on the pastor's farm. Niels was stupid, and very soon Soren and he quarreled, the clergyman as usual indulging in abuse, threats and even blows.

At last Niels disappeared, and Morten, his brother, accused Soren of the murder. A neighbor testified that she had heard the pastor abusing Niels in a frantic rage; that he cried out, "I will beat thee dead, dog!" and struck him with a spade twice, and that Niels fell—dead as she supposed.

Another man deposed that on the same evening he saw a man carrying a heavy sack to another part of the pastor's grounds, and Soren's own servant testified that they saw him by moonlight in his green dressing-gown and white cap digging a hole in a cabbage bed.

The hole was opened, and Neils' body was found there. Soren was tried and sentenced to death. Before his execution he confessed that his rage was so great that he had struck Niels, fully intending to kill him, but that the man, frightfully wounded, had run away.

"If," said Soren, "I found his dead body and buried it, it was in my sleep. God has brought me to this punishment. Murder was in my heart. He is just."

Twenty-one years after Soren was executed, Niels Burns returned. He testified that he had gone, when wounded, to his brother, who dug up a body buried recently, dressed it in Niels' clothes, and buried it in the garden, wearing the pastor's dressing-gown and cap. The chain of evidence was thus complete against Soren, and he was punished, illegally, yet justly, for the murder he had purposed to do.—Bloomingon Eye..

He Beat the Conductor.

One of our townsmen, who was up North a short time since, tells a pretty good story of a joke on a conductor in the employ of Utica and Black River Railroad Company. The conductor runs a passenger train. It seems that a young fellow residing near Lowville has quite a local reputation as a dance artist, traveling considerable about the country and dancing at entertainments for the amusement of the people He is noted for genial manners, and the boys attempt to "run upon him" on account of his good nature.

A short time since the young man referred to had occasion to travel from one station to another, a distance of about two miles, and he conceived the idea that it was easier to ride than to walk. He had no money, so he resolved to beg a ride. The conductor promptly refused to carry him free, but the fellow insisted he ought to ride free.

The conductor insisted that he should not, and the fellow offered to bet that he would get a free ride to his place of destination. He had a hand-sled with him and when the train was about to start he went to the rear and hitched on.

Away went the train, dragging the sled, with the boy seated thereon. Train hands and passengers looked on in astonishment. The conductor went to the rear platform and asked the venturesome fellow for his ticket. The boy laughed at him and hung on. The conductor resolved to give him a shaking up, so he ordered the engineer to put on extra steam. The train fairly flew. The sled scarcely touched the snow, so great was the speed of the train. It remained right side up all the time, however, and the deadhead passenger hung on like grim death.

The upshot of the matter was that the dance artist reached his destination in safety, and joked the conductor unmercifully. It is supposed the latter bought the segars for the crowd. The boy, by his recklessness and grit, won the admiration of the conductor, and now rides free on the train any time he likes.—Rome (N. Y.) Sentinel.

A Hundred Years Ago.

One hundred years ago wedding tours were not fashionable.

One hundred years ago farmers did not cut their legs off with mowing machines.

One hundred years ago a young woman did not lose caste by wetting her hands in dishwater, or rubbing the skin off her knuckles on the washboard.

One hundred years ago the physician who could not draw every form of disease from the system, by tapping a large vein in the arm, was not much of a doctor.

One hundred years ago people did not worry about rapid transit and cheap transportation, but threw their grain across the backs of their horses and uncomplainingly went to mill.

One hundred years ago every man cut his coat according to his cloth; every man was estimated at his own value, shoddy was not known; nobody had struck "ile," and true merit and honest worth were the only ground for promotion.—Terra Haute Mail.

If those who over-eat and those who half starve would strike a balance, the world would be well fed.

Strength of resolution is, in itself, dominion and ability; and there is a seed of sovereignty in the barrenness of unflinching determination.

A wife should be her husband's dearest and nearest friend, therefore his equal in the qualities of the heart and mind; as capable of advising as of consoling him; a true woman, to be his helpmate and companion, not a goddess to be set on a pedestal and adored with prostrate homage; or a doll to be tricked out with the gauds of ostentatious and degrading partiality.

50 Cts. per Year. Three Months, 15 Cts.

Meredith Centre.

The upper dam bridge will be finished this week.

Mr. Dias, our blacksmith, is having plenty of work, and is soon to move his family to this place.

Mr. Marshall is making extensive repairs on his mill, and will soon be running in full force.

Smith M. Glidden and G. L. P. Corliss have gone to the F. W. B. Quarterly Meeting, at Gilmanton Iron Works, the present week.

Ashland.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis of Boston, are visiting friends here.

Dr. J. A. Dana and wife returned from a visit west, last Friday evening.

The Drum Corps played for a flag raising and torch-light procession, on Saturday evening last.

There is to be a meeting Wednesday, to see if the town will vote to build an iron bridge on the abutments now being built over Squam River.

Centre Harbor.

The bell boy at the Senter House is called "Front," for whenever he goes out no one can tell when he will be back.

Many of our citizens will attend the Belknap County Fair; and Mrs. Sutton will contribute some of her fine stock to the animal exhibit.

Among the arrivals at the Senter House during the past week, were the following gentlemen with their families: J. B. Barnaby, Providence, R. I., Charles Maynard, Brookline, Mass., A. V. Kessam, N. Y., F. C. Butman, Salem, Mass., C. I. Richards, Elizabeth, N. J., George P. Farrington, Salem, Mass. This last named gentleman is the present owner of the old house in Salem where the witches were tried, in the days of Salem witchcraft.

The voice of "Mud" is no longer heard in the land, as she and "Dump" have returned to their respective homes.

The steamers now run to the Harbor but once a day, and consequently we receive but six mails per week.

The fall term of the district school began last Monday, with George H. Caverly as teacher.

Mrs. Eliza True of Moultonborough was found dead in her bed Tuesday afternoon. She was last seen on Sunday evening when she appeared in perfect health: but not being seen either Monday or Tuesday by the neighbors, her house was visited by friends and an entrance effected through the window, when she was found reposing peacefully in the "sleep that knows no waking." The deceased was seventy-three years of age, has been a widow for several years, and leaves many descendants in Moultonborough and Centre Harbor.

Those who have frequented the Lake for many years say it is lower than it has been at any previous time for the last ten years. Probably since the "Murphy movement" the people have used such quantities of cold water as to even lower the lake and many wells in our vicinity.

The Critical Event of Life.

Many of the errors of life admit of remedy. A loss in one business may be repaired by a gain in another; a miscalculation this year may be retrieved by a special care the next; a bad partnership may be dissolved, an injury repaired, a wrong step retraced. But an error in marriage goes to the very root and foundation of life. The deed once done cannot be recalled. The goblet is broken and the wine of life is wasted, and no tears or toils can bring back the precious draught. Let the young think of this, and let them walk carefully in a world of snares, and take heed to their step lest in the most critical event of life they go astray.

A Shrewd Stroke.

"Why, George, how are you getting along?" said one young man to another in front of the New Orleans post-office.

"Splendid! Never had so much fun in all my life," was the answer.

"How's that, George?"

"Well, you see, Ned, after I lost my situation, all my friends left me, and used to pass by without even recognizing me. I was determined to get even, so I circulated a report among them that I was the fortunate holder of one-half of a lottery ticket that had just drawn a big prize."

"Did it take?"

"You just bet it took! Why, in two days' time I received no less than a dozen invitations from fellows whom I had almost forgotten. I was presented with two new suits of clothes, four new hats, two dozen embroidered handkerchiefs, a silk umbrella, a beautiful amethyst ring, and a handsome pair of gold sleeve-buttons. I visited Spanish Fort five times, took one trip to the jetties on the Cannon, and borrowed, all told, $150 in United States currency. Did it take? Well, I should smile."

One Who Won't Go.

There are some men who do not lose their presence of mind when confronted with startling political news. One of this class, an easy-going, honest-minded elector, was mysteriously approached the other day by an "unknown," who carefully locked the office door and whispered:

"I have been deputized to wait on you and say that the boys are talking you up as a Congressional candidate."

"Yes."

"You are known to be honest and reliable, and if nominated you will carry the masses."

"Perhaps."

"All you've got to do is to keep still," continued the unknown. "Just let us work the boom for you. You are our man. You have our respect and confidence. Mum's the word—we'll fix things. You'll accept?"

"Well, I guess so."

"Good! You are in the hands of your friends! Don't say a word."

The unknown left the office on tip-toe, but in ten minutes he returned, and then carelessly observed:

"Oh, by the way, I'm $5 short on a little bill to-day. If you could spare it, I'd be very much obliged, and I'd return it on Saturday."

"Say," replied the citizen in a whisper, as he beckoned the other to the door—"all you've got to do is to keep still! You are in the hands of your friends! Don't say a word! Let me fix this boom for you."

He shoved the unknown gently out, locked the door and went back to his desk with the firm conviction that some one else would be tendered the nomination.

Slim.

In Houston, Texas, the other day, t the Pinafore matinee, a long, gaunt individual with legs as thin as whittled matches, came into the theatre, and stood in front of some gentlemen, shutting out their view of the stage. One of the party said: "If you guess what that is before us I'll put a label on it."

"It's a plumb line somebody has dropped down from the family circle." remarked another, and the thin man began to move aside.

"Next to boarding-house soup, it's the thinnest thing I've seen," said a third party, and the slim man got uneasy and sat down.

Mr. Joseph Ela intends to put up two more double tenement houses on Plymouth Street, soon.

Himes V. Jones is progressing finely on his new house, and it will soon be ready for occupancy.

Duncan Wiley had his hand caught and badly sprained while at work in the machine shop, Tuesday.

Jesse Blake has commenced building the barn in the rear of his house, to be occupied by Edwin Cox.

Dustin & Colby's Orchestra will hold another of those Concerts and Hops, on Wednesday evening, the 29th.

The ladies of the North Church Society will hold another of their popular Ice Cream and Cake Sociables next Wednesday evening.

Sam. Hodgson's new mill which is to be built, is to be 26 x 80 feet in size, and is to be as thoroughly built as the one he now occupies.

The Mechanics' Band will give another of their open air concerts next Saturday evening, at 7:30 o'clock. The following is the programme:

March,	"Elsinore."	Webb.
Fantasia,	"Moonlight Revels."	Goetz.
Waltz,	"Echoes from the Forest."	Keller.
Cornet Polka,	"Promenade."	Samuels.
Schottische,	"Beau Ideal."	Prosho.
Mazurka,	"All the Go."	Goetz.
"Dancing in the Barn."		Claus.
Galop,	"Slap Dash."	Webb.
Quickstep,	"Fireman's Muster."	Frehde.

C. H. Colby, Director.

The water has been turned into its new channel near the mills and now Hodgson's improvements can go on.

Mr. P. W. Heath of this town, recently raised from one pea bean, and on one vine, 180 pods containing 917 perfect beans beside the poor ones.

Another liquor case in which the party chose disclosure rather than jail, which involves two of our citizens who have appealed to a higher court.

A little "Young America" was caught emerging from the Post Office this morning with $1.65, which he took from the drawer in the temporary absence of the P. M.

Mr. Edward Rand, while at work recently, got an iron chip into his eye, which has resisted all efforts of removal. It is said now, that he must lose his eye in consequence, though we hope this may not be true.

Miss M. Eva Dearborn has purchased the stock of Millinery Goods of O. M. Knowles & Co., and will continue the business at the old stand. Miss. Dearborn has had a long experience in the business, and deserves the patronage of the public.

We know of no improvement that could be made by our town that is more needed than a safe and substantial bridge in the place of the one on Main St., near T. S. Moses' Shop. Why can we not have a stone, or better still, an iron one which will be much cheaper in the end, and much more safe for public travel?

Great inconvenience is experienced by not receiving the mail which goes through this place at 11 o'clock at night, till the first mail train the next day, thereby delaying a reply till the afternoon mail. Can there not be some arrangement made to have the mail left here at night, and distributed early the next morning?

Miss Kate McLean, formerly a resident of this place, and lately of Salem, Mass., died in Boston, where she had lately been employed, on Monday last, of inflamation of the bowels. Her remains were brought here for interment. Only one brother was able to accompany them. Hosts of friends extend their sympathy to the aged mother and invalid sister who were unable to accompany the remains. Miss McLean was 31 years of age, and had two brothers and one sister.

Two pieces of music have just come to hand, written by D. Arthur Vittum of this town. One is a song in answer to "Where is my boy tonight," published by C. M. Cady, of New York; and the other—"Aquarius March," for piano, published by Himan & Woodward of New York. The last piece seems to be taking quite well, and Mr. V. has been requested to arrange it for one of the New York bands. The price of each piece is 35 cents, but Mr. V. is supplying his friends at 25 cents each. Mr. Vittum promises to be one of the greatest musical composers of the age.
